For everything you need to know about agility in Victoria
Volume 4 No. 3 APRIL 2005

From the Editors

New prestigious agility events are not common in Australia, however, the SA Canine Association has successfully started one as part of their re vamped autumn dog event now known as the Pedigree Autumn International 2005.

This event comprised, in addition to conformation and other canine events, 4 agility trials over two days with judges from the ACT, Victoria, Western Australian and South Australia. The event was held in the main arena of the Wayville Showgrounds and proved to be an attraction for many people at the show grounds to visit the Home and Garden Show. It is an event worthwhile noting for Autumn next year – there is a report on this years event later in the news letter.

There appears to be some 'unraveling' happening amongst VCA affiliates with one old established obedience club deciding not to reaffiliate with the VCA and at least two others considering not re affiliating. One of these clubs holds ANKC agility trials which of course they will not be able to do unless they are affiliated so less agility trials next year? The issue appears to be the $5.00 levy for insurance purposes made by the VCA on all non VCA members belonging to affiliates; the affiliates claim they can self insure for less.

Perhaps the most disturbing consequence of clubs that do agility not re affiliating is that it may reduce the number of people that they feed into agility and thus may affect our growth (as well as that of the obedience function). The VCA in terms of assets is a large business organization.

The final part of the National Rule Change Conference will be held as a teleconference on May the 19th. Most of the rumors are correct in that the jump height decision made at the conference in January, if confirmed, will increase the height that some (small) dogs currently jump. The conference also failed to treat all height categories equally thus the decision is quite discriminatory, and veterinary advice offered to the conference was discounted. Victoria is proposing a rescission motion in order to attempt to achieve more reasonable treatment for our dogs.

Unfortunately welfare of dogs did not appear to receive much consideration – strange for an organization that views itself as Australia's' premier canine body!!!

Regards

Ian & Jenni

2006 TOP AGILITY & JUMPING DOG OF THE YEAR

The 2006 rules for eligibility to enter the finals of the top agility and jumping dogs of the year are as follows.

- Points to be gained from clear rounds in 10 classes
- The 10 classes must include 7 Master Classes and no Novice Classes
- Only 3 results from interstate trials
- No results from restricted trials

In January 2006 there may be new agility and jumping classes introduced, the current Open class may also be renamed. Once the final details of the new agility and jumping rules are known their effect, if any on the above rules for top dog, will be publicised.

AN INTRODUCTION TO AGILITY HANDLER MOVEMENTS

Have you ever stood around an agility ring and overheard some competitors talking about a front cross or a reverse flow pivot and wondered what they are talking about?

Agility, like any other sport has its own terminology which is widely used in the UK and USA and is fast becoming popular here. Below is a list of common moves.

Front Cross

The handler turns towards the dog, transferring the dog to a new lead hand. Use this turn to line the dog up for a straight approach to a series of jumps, or to a contact obstacle or weave poles. The handler should be slightly ahead of the dog so that the dog actually sees the rotation of the handler's body. The handler is responsible for calling the dog's attention to the new lead hand. The dog turns when you turn - when the turn follow a jump, don't turn too early or this will result in a dropped bar.

Blind Cross

The Blind Cross is a crossing turn in front of the dog in which the handler turns away from the dogs and shows a new lead hand on the opposite side. The handler turns away from the dog, and in the direction of the course, changing the dog to a new lead hand. Use the Blind Cross when you want an efficient turn from your dog. You should be running as you do the turn and you should be well in front of your dog. The dog has to see the entire turn. With an obvious hand signal, you must get your dog's attention to your new lead hand.

You are supposed to be blind for about half a second, not for half a minute. Ideal for slower dogs.

Back or Rear Cross

The Back Cross is a cross behind the dog on the take off side of a jump. Ideal for dogs that are ahead of the handler on the course. Wait till the dog is committed to the obstacle before crossing behind the dog.

Reverse Flow Pivot (RFP)

The RFP is actually two crossing turns, one coming quickly after the other. The RFP has two parts, a rotation towards the dog and then a turn back to the original direction. The effect of the RFP is to tighten the dog to the handler position.

To get an idea of what these turns look like try this website www.dogwoodagility.com/handlermoves.htm

The little piggy who went to agility!
[from Dogworld UK, Jan 2005]

SPECTATORS at an agility display were astonished to see the team's new recruit – a heavyweight pig.

Agility wizard Purdey with a German Shepherd friend.

Even more surprising was the fact the Purdey, the 31 stone New Zealand Kune Kune, was not only negotiating the weaving poles, going through the dog tunnel and demonstrating retrieval techniques, she was the star of the show.

Other competitors had to admit that it seemed she was a faster learner and a more natural performer than the rest of the canine team.

Trained since birth by owner Sue Williams in the agility stakes, three year old Purdey learnt the tasks twice as fast as any of the dogs and she leaves her canine counterparts standing for the show's grand finale – a trick which involves taking a hoop off a cone and putting it into a bucket. Clever Purdey completes the task in no time – while the dogs have failed to master it at all.

Mrs Williams who runs the Cheshire Canine Centre with her husband Derek, said: "Pigs are definitely cleverer than dogs. I've tried to teach the dogs to do the same trick that she does with the hoop and cone, but they don't understand."

As soon as Mrs Williams bought Purdey as a piglet, she was introduced to the agility course at their farm near Warrington.

"She was great at the retrieval demonstrations, especially as she knew her reward was a bunch of grapes," she said.

"She used to fly over the dog jumps too, but as she has got heavier she can't get over the jumps like she used to."

In the ring

with Michael Cowman

Remember to send your questions to VAN for Michael to discuss in the next issue.

Michael

My question to you is what resources, exercises and activities are there that I can access to enhance my handling abilities without confusing my dog while I am learning?

Background

*My awareness of the negative impact of poor handling has several sources, the prime one being watching my poor dog wanting to do something, anything but not knowing what it is I want him to do. I am a first timer re agility and my dog is now at the point where he needs better handling in order to progress. He is reasonably adept at the obstacles but he is reliant on my slow, awkward and sometimes confusing directions. I need to improve my handling for this partnership to work, specifically my reaction time, accuracy and body positioning. To date I have read several books etc but they concentrate primarily on how to teach your dog to do XY&Z. I have rehearsed in my head the movements, played "aeroplanes", physically undertaken things without my dog. When I have asked others how they developed their skills they say it is experience and that it will happen over time. By then my poor dog will be an old man and I will have wasted his abilities and enthusiasm for the sport. I am prepared to put in the work I just need to know what to do. HELP!!!! LINDA

Hi Linda

Thanks for the question, or questions <g>. You have asked things that it could take a number of good books, good instructors over an extended period of time, and many seminar attendances, to answer.

I have highlighted some of the key elements in your request, all of which I believe are relevant. But let's consider a couple of things first. What are the primary things that our dogs need to learn to achieve in agility?

Firstly they will need fast, solid contact performances and reliable weave entries with good execution. If your dog is fast and you are slow, you will need to be able to perform lead outs reliably (from the start line and the table) to enable you to reach control points on courses to minimize the potential for errors. You will also want to be able to send your dog on in fast straight stretches of the course where you can't keep up. And lastly, you will need your dog to be able to respond quickly and confidently to both verbal and body cues.

Resources.

I don't know your personal circumstances Linda, whether you have much of a back yard, whether you have to other people in your life whom you seriously need to consider when it comes to your dog related activities. But I think you can learn heaps of things in your own back yard with a set of weave poles, three bar jumps and a tunnel. The number of permutations and combinations you can devise with three jumps and a tunnel is amazing. Weave poles should be set up so that weave entry can only be attained in the correct manner. Contacts are more difficult, but a timber plank descending from a table or raised mound in the back yard is a good starting point. And these days, you can buy contact trainers if you are keen enough and have the financial resources to afford one. Ultimately, it will come down to consistency and practice and anyone who has these 'resources' in their own back yard (and the time to use them) does have a considerable advantage.

There are other resources available to you. If you go to an Agility club for training, as a general rule you will have qualified and experienced instructors who have been there and done it. Ask questions of them, and listen and watch what they say and do. And never be afraid to try something new.

The same goes for seminars. Of recent times Australia has been blessed with a range of illustrious overseas competitors offering seminars in Australia. Let's face it, these people have been to the top of the world in agility, they know what they are talking about. Some of the training techniques that they use, and the exercises they have developed will be ideally suited to teaching your dog (and you) the things that you need to know.

Exercises and Activities

I could write a book on this topic, and there is no way I have that sort of time. But there is a magazine called Clean Run, which has a series in it called 'Backyard Dogs'. They put out series of exercises each month that start with basic exercises and build in difficulty. They are very worthwhile. There is a new series of tapes called 'Agility In Motion', and these are becoming very popular for the same reason.

Some of the things you need to consider teaching when it comes to working with your dog are – send away (or distance work), tight turns around bar jump uprights, get out and come in commands, turns away from your body, and solid lead outs including the physical mechanics of the lead out that make it work. I do think that it is important to concentrate on one thing at a time when you are training. Trying to teach too many things at a time can confuse your dog, especially in the early days.

You need to find a motivator that works for your dog. Some dogs will be very food oriented, some will be very ball or toy oriented, some will just want to play with you and please you. They are all different, and you need to find what works best for your dog. I personally like playing learning games around feed time as the dog is pretty naturally focused on you.

Slow reaction times and awkward, inaccurate body language.

I have to say that you do see some strange things happen in agility. And sure, it's true, there is probably a 'good' and a 'bad' way to do things when it comes to body language. But the reality is, we are all different shapes and sizes and some of us can bend in ways that others can't <g>. In other words we simply have to make do with what 'God' gave us. The secret is to be consistent in what we do. We may struggle to achieve a particular result but then something suddenly clicks for the dog, and you achieve the desired result. We need to be smart enough to analyse what we did that worked and then set about repeating it again and again. This helps us 'memorize' the movement in our mind and body, and helps teach the dog the desired end result. The same applies after an agility run, if something has gone wrong, you need to have the ability to work back through your run to work out why it went wrong. It often helps to have a colleague whose opinion you value watching you so they can assist in the analysis process. Even better if someone can tape your runs for you and you can check back later to see what went wrong. Analysis, especially honest, self analysis immediately after your run has finished is important. But only after you praise your dog for being wonderful and having fun with you of course.

The other thing that is important, especially with driven dogs, is to give decisive and early commands for what you want it to do. I would rather give a decisive early command and be 'wrong' than fiddle around and demotivate the dog so that it spins around and barks at me in frustration. At least I can think back to what I did and analyse where we went wrong later. If I have a spinning, barking dog prancing around me there is no way I can even think about what I am doing wrong – I'm more worried about tripping over the dog or myself.

Experience

Unfortunately, for the vast majority of us, experience will end up being our best teacher. I'm personally onto my 4th agility dog and will soon be training my 5th. And, I've learned heaps from each dog. My Deerhound X taught me the fun and exhilaration of agility, my first Vizsla taught me humility and patience (he was a nervous hand me down <g>), an associates' Kelpie X taught me the challenge of a fast, motivated dog, and my second Vizsla has helped me resolve a lot of distance/time saving methods necessary to make a Vizsla competitive with working dogs. I've learned from each dog, and no doubt my new Kelpie puppy will teach me even more. Don't expect miracles, this isn't as easy as people might think, but it is fun and good mental and physical exercise for us, and our dogs. By all means try to be the best that you can be, but don't lose sight of the fact that it has to stay fun.

PEDIGREE AUTUMN INTERNATIONAL

Recently we traveled to Adelaide for the Pedigree Autumn International Festival held on the Anzac Day long weekend. Hot autumn days with 30° daytime temperatures were not what we expected.

Congratulations to those who organized this friendly and smoothly run event. Along with three judges from SA, judges from ACT, Vic and WA also officiated. Courses were appropriate and enjoyable to run and the working dogs didn't appear to be bothered by the heat. We were impressed by the very high standard of handling demonstrated by the South Australians. Front crosses were definitely the go.

It was good to catch up with Airlie and Ron from ACT and Peter and Veronica from Tasmania as well as our South Australian friends and acquaintances.

Thanks to Peter Dynan for his hospitality and for sending the results for publication.
